Due to the fact that he developed all his professional career at INI, his chairmanship did not cause any discontinuity with the work carried out by the Institute's first Chairman, but by Decree 480/1968, INI changed its administrative attachment, from the Ministry of the Presidency to the Ministry of Industry; as a result, INI lost its industrial protagonism, and decisions on industrial policy began to be taken at the Ministry. During his tenure as Chairman, the companies HUNOSA, ENTURSA, UNINSA, AUXIESA, AESA and EDES were incorporated, Celuosa inaugurated its factories at Huelva and Motril, which in 1968 were merged into ENCE, together with Celulosa's factory at Pontevedra.
